Reported: 04/11/2026. Officers were dispatched to an apartment after neighbors reported screaming, a female yelling for someone to stop, and sounds of items being slammed. While officers were en route, a male resident reported that two female family members were arguing and he was attempting to separate them. He also reported there were no weapons present. Upon arrival, officers contacted one of the involved females, who was highly upset but eventually explained that an argument over cleaning escalated into one family member intentionally pouring liquids and makeup on her belongings. She said she attempted to intervene, leading to a physical altercation in which she sustained a visible scratch. Another adult in the home stated that the first female entered a room, began damaging the other female's property, and attacked her. He reported being struck with a broom when he tried to intervene. He and another witness reported that both women pulled each other's hair, and officers observed hair that had been pulled out. Both adult females admitted to mutual physical fighting. One also admitted to intentionally damaging property and stated she was experiencing hallucinations related to an untreated mental health condition. Two juveniles were present and witnessed the incident. Because both adults struck each other in a rude and angry manner, caused injury in the presence of minors, and were family members living in the same household, officers determined that domestic battery in the presence of children had occurred.
